SEASON OF THE GREAT FAST

Jesus Christ reveals to His disciples a central mystery of the Christian faith: that salvation comes through suffering freely accepted in obedience to God. Jesus openly teaches that the Son of Man must suffer, be rejected by the elders, chief priests, and scribes, be killed, and rise again after three days. This prediction of the Passion is shocking to the disciples, especially Peter, because they expected a Messiah who would triumph through power and glory rather than humiliation and sacrifice. Jesus' response shows that God's plan of redemption does not follow human logic; instead, it reveals a deeper truth that love expressed through sacrifice has the power to bring salvation. By rebuking Peter and saying, "Get behind me, Satan," Jesus makes clear that rejecting the necessity of the cross is a temptation to turn away from God's saving will. He then extends the meaning of His own suffering to all who desire to follow Him, declaring that discipleship requires self-denial and the willingness to take up one's cross. This teaching shows that Christian suffering, when united with Christ's suffering, participates in His redemptive work. The cross is no longer merely an instrument of death but becomes the sign of God's transforming love. Through His Passion and Resurrection, Christ demonstrates that suffering endured for the sake of faith, truth, and love can lead to new life and eternal glory. For the Church, this passage is a powerful reminder that authentic discipleship often involves sacrifice, perseverance, and trust in God even in the midst of trials. Believers are called to place the Gospel above personal comfort, remembering Jesus' warning that gaining the whole world is worthless if one loses one's soul. At the same time, Jesus promises that those who remain faithful to Him will experience the power of God's kingdom.
